Scams target the people you love. Give them their own second look.

Each adult you invite, even when they live apart, gets their own KAIA-OR: a second look at messages and links, and alerts for their own places and trips.

Who it's for

Adults who want the people they care about, such as parents in another city or a sibling abroad, to have a second look before they reply or pay, and to know what affects their own places. KAIA-OR Family brings invited adults into one family space, and each of them keeps their own KAIA-OR.

The challenge

- Older relatives are targeted from afar. Messages that impersonate a relative, a bank or a delivery company carry the same warning signs: requests for sign-in details or demands for money. The family often learns about it too late, and from far away.
- Worry with no clear information. When a storm or an earthquake is in the news, it is hard to tell whether it touches the places where relatives live.
- Helping without intruding. Families want to look out for one another without reading one another's messages or following one another's movements.

> In 2025, people aged 60 and over reported $7.748 billion in internet crime losses to US authorities, up 59% on 2024, across 201,266 complaints, which were up 37%.[1]

What you get

A second look for parents who live apart

When a message impersonates a relative, a bank or a delivery company, each member can paste it in, or ask Hey KAIA, the KAIA-OR assistant, out loud, and hear the warning signs and a suggested next step in English, French, Turkish or Hebrew. Links stay unopened, and the decision stays with the member.

Their places, their trips

Each member saves their own places and trips and sees which events touch them, such as an earthquake near their city, and why, with how well each one is corroborated. Each member gets their own alerts for their own places.

Each person keeps their own KAIA-OR

Roles manage membership, not people. Membership never grants access to another member's messages, devices, location or saved places.

One family space, one family price

One family space with an Owner who manages invitations. Each invited adult uses KAIA-OR on their own device, in their own language.

A day with KAIA-OR

Each member has their own KAIA-OR inside one family space.

1. The Owner creates a family space and invites a parent who lives in another city, with a single-use invitation bound to the parent's own account, passed on through a channel they both trust.
2. The parent sets KAIA-OR to Turkish and saves their own home.
3. When a message that claims to come from a relative demands money, the parent asks Hey KAIA out loud and hears the warning signs and a suggested next step.
4. The parent calls the relative on a number they already know before doing anything else.
5. When an event concerns the parent's city, the parent sees it in their own KAIA-OR, with why it matched.

Privacy and control

- Roles manage membership, not people. Membership never grants access to another member's messages, devices, location or saved places, and these membership boundaries are enforced at the application layer.
- Each member's exact location stays on their own device.
- Nothing goes to cloud AI unless the member agrees first.
- Sharing is the member's choice. A member can choose to share their device security status with the family Owner, and stop at any time.
- Family membership is for invited adults, and each adult accepts their own invitation.

Security & privacy on the KAIA-OR website describes these principles in full.

Package

The family space Owner pays for KAIA-OR Family, which covers up to six adults in one family space, even when they live apart, for personal use. It is billed monthly after a 7-day trial, and prices for your market are on Packages on the KAIA-OR website.

The Owner invites each adult with a one-time invitation that works only for that adult's own account and expires after 24 hours. Each adult has their own account and their own personal space, and signs in with their own e-mail address and password and an authenticator app as a second sign-in step. Membership never grants access to another member's data.
