Who it's for

People who want to know what affects the places they live, work and visit, and who want a second look before they reply to, or pay on, a message they are not sure about. KAIA-OR Individual is the same KAIA-OR, from one person to a government agency, packaged for one person.

The challenge

- Not sure a message is real. Messages that impersonate a relative, a delivery company or a financial institution share familiar warning signs: requests for sign-in details or demands for money. Most people only realize a message was not real after they have replied or paid.
- Too many generic alarms. When news and alerts are not about your own places, you either worry about all of it or start ignoring it, and the one event that matters is easy to miss.
- Travel is unclear. Before a trip it is hard to tell whether anything changed for your destination, and what it means for you.

> Scam messages ask for something quickly: sign-in details, money or a click. The moment to check is before you act, with the link unopened.

What you get

Before you reply or pay

Paste a message to see the warning signs KAIA-OR recognizes. Check a link while it stays unopened. You see what looks wrong, when the check can't tell, and a suggested next step, such as confirming through a channel you already trust. The decision stays with you.

Only what touches your places and trips

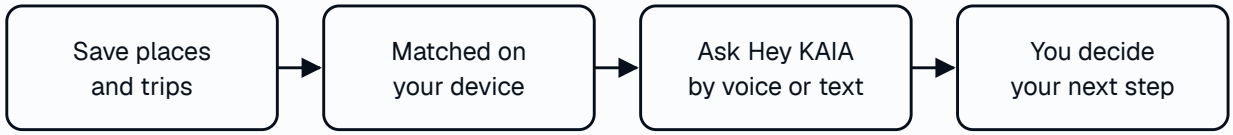

Hazards, security incidents, disruptions and cyber events are matched to the places you save and the trips you plan, each with why it matched and how well it is corroborated. Before a trip, follow the official travel advisory for your destination and see which fields changed in each new revision.

Ask Hey KAIA what it means for you

By voice or text, in English, French, Turkish or Hebrew. Answers are worked out on your device first and cite their evidence. On hazards, Hey KAIA relays the publisher's own guidance and never writes its own safety instructions.

A day with KAIA-OR

A personal picture that starts with what you choose to save.

1. You save your home, your office and the city you travel to next week.
2. You follow the official travel advisory for that destination. When a new revision is published, you see the previous and new publication dates and the fields that changed.
3. When an event concerns your destination, KAIA-OR shows it with its severity, confidence, corroboration status and why it matched. You ask Hey KAIA, by voice, what it means for your trip, and the answer cites its evidence.
4. On arrival you start Around me and see the published official events around you. When you stop, your position is cleared.
5. When a message that claims to come from a delivery company demands money, you paste it in and see the warning signs and a suggested next step.
6. You check with the sender through a channel you already trust, and decide for yourself.

Privacy and control

- Your saved places and the messages and links you check stay on your device.
- Your exact location stays on your device, and matching runs on your device.
- Hey KAIA works out answers on your device first, and nothing goes to a cloud AI service unless you agree first.
- KAIA-OR checks only what you choose to paste. It does not read your inbox or your other apps.
